AUTHORITY OF CONGRESS.

It Should Be Called on to Establish Post Roads and Thus Be Free From Railroad Monopolies-Official News From Samos. Other Disputches From the National

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The postmaster general has sent in a reply to the request of the house committee on postoffices and post roads, for his opinion on house bill 12109. which requires railroad companies to carry the mails at the rates of compensation fixed by law. In his answer the postmaster general points out the present condition of the law under which any railroad company may refuse to take the mails, and by which the department can secure their carriage by contract only. . He shows that the only legal alternative in case of the refusal of the railroad to contract is to send the mails forward by pony express under Section $999 of the revised statutes He presents an exhaustive argument in the constitutional authority of congress in the premises, and points out that it is the duty of congress to exercise it. He mays "The exercise of that power in the form of such egislation as this has for many years been a necessity to an adult and efficient postonice establishment. Without department of the government, charged with the responsibility for good service, occurres in obtaining it, the weak posttion of a private negotiate or rather than the strong one of a fair government maintaining 9 clear prerogetive."

"All relations commercial and otherwise. are now adjusted to modern and rapid means of communication which are a necessity."

Existing legislation, doubtless adequate in the days of the stage coach, the runner and the road wagon when on the failure of a contractor the government was equipped and ready to operate its own methods over its post roads, is inadequate in these days when the made are carried almost wholly by railroad and that p st road can be traversed by one metaod only.

He cites Story, Marshall, Field, Charles Summer and others, with copious decisions of the supreme court of the United States in support of the proposition that the power to establish post roads covers this question, and upon it the liberal and strict constructionists of the constitution are in harmony. "The power extends to authorize what in the judgment of congress may be necessary to secure the object for which the power was The right to assume control implies and demands as a necessity incident, the right to prosect the government from rivalry and from being subject to the caprice of the corner. Such a power would be of little avail if it were not coupled with the prerogative to fix the rates which the government will pay for carriage and require and compel the service of such carriers as are within the range of soverign power."

"In submitting this subject it is unnecessary to illustrate detects in the law by incidents in the experience of the department. It is enough to point out the condition of legislation. While the department bears testimony in the fact that with rare exception there has been cordial co-operation on the part of the roads, yet this branch of the government should not in its dealings be in a position where it must avoid issue us to its authority, and where in case of extremity its only practicable resource, as was the case in one instance in my own administration, is to risk the assertion and exercise of a doubtful power and an a ppeal to public sentiment."

The postmuster general furnishes an abstract of the laws of all civilized countries. showing that ours stands alone in the absence which legislation as this.

He comments as follows: "With rapid facilities a necessity to the mail service with the whole subject of legislation exclusively within the jurisdiction of the congress, with the power and duty to legislate clearly apparent I venture to suggest that the present condition of the law under which the service may be stopped at the caprice of a carrier, reproach to a government established to promote the public welfare.

The committee has voted unanimously to report the bill favorably. The postmaster general will at once send to the committee his views on the proposed horizontal reduction of compensation to railroads for carrying the muils. He considers that this measure is inexpedient and to some extent unfair and will advise against its adoption.

Action - General Boulanger Perfectly satisfied With the Result of the Election-O'Brien Still in Hiding-Other For-

Paris, Jan. 29 .- In consequence of the ictory of Gen. Boulanger the ministry tendered their resignations but President Carnot adopted in the event of disorders arising.

It is stated that a majority of the minis ters are in favor of dissolving the chambers and holding a general election in April, but firs modifying the electoral laws in order to prevent plebiserary proceedings. Some members of the chamber of deputies advocate strong anti-Boulangist measures by the government. They urge that Gen Campenin be asked to form a cabinet.

sin, Who is the Most Prominent Represcutative German-American in Congress-A Rumor That Either Bayard or Whitney Will Resign.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. - The question has been asked what the attitude of our German-American citizens would be in case war broke out between the United States and Germany. and the real sentiment of this portion of American citizenship on the subject of our present relations with the German government touching the Samoan islands is a matter of considerable interest and specula

The German minister in Washington has already reported, is taking great pains to find out, through the German-American press and other available means, the German-American sentiment in the premises. The Germans in this country are generally admitted in ordinary matters, not involving absolute hostility to the Fatherland, to be nuite as American as Americans themselves: but how they would feel and how they would fight if their adopted country and the land of their birth should be placed face to face in battle array is yet an unsolved problem.

It would be an extremely new situation and an experiment which has never yet been tried. Many Germans left their native land to escape the iron rule of Bismarck, and came to the United States for the benefit of a freer, easier life and government. The conscript laws of Germany to them made life almost unendurable there, and when it was only to protect them from the claim and the rasp of their iron chancellor that the United | tual cost. No goods would be sent (° O D) tates government would interfere in their behalf, it was easy for them to choose between one government and one country and another; but it would be an entirely different case if they were asked to go on board a United States man-of-war or shoulder muskets and go in the field in front of a German army and blaze at their brothers and cousins, whom they left behind in the old country.

Congressman Guenther, of Wisconsin, is the most prominent representative German-American in congress. He has no hesitation in declaring for the United States against Germany, all along the line, in war as well "There is going to be no war between Germany and the United States," said Mr. Guen-ther. "The countries are too far apart to make a fight possible. A battle between the inhabitants of Mars and Jupiter would be as fensable and pretty nearly as probable. We are not going to fight about any differences that may exist between opposing factions in a little bit of a place like Samoa, where they are only 30,000 people, such as they are, all We may send out gunboats to enter the connectitive drill show with the gunboats of the German empire at Samos. Our onsular and naval officers and the consular and naval officers of Germany may talk very ited reports to their respective governments, but these are only harmless embelshments of diplomatic correspondence. They are sent out there simply to point a moral and silorn a tale, to make life interesting and to impart a picture eque aspect to national affairs.

"No hostile shot will ever be exchanged in Samoan waters or elsewhere between the nen-of-war sent there by Prince Bismarck and Uncle Sam. American citizens of German birth and German descent know as well as any other class of American citizens where as any other class of American citizens where their duties belong. We will work for our will allow the new men to go to work withcountry in time of neare and fight for it in time of war, if a time of war should over come. When I say our country I mean, of course, our adopted country-I mean the United States of America. After passing through the crucible of naturalization we are no longer Germans, we are Americans. bur attachment to America cannot be more ured by the length of our residence here. We ire Americans from the moment we touch the American shore until we are laid in American graves. We will fight for Amerca whenever necessary; America first, last and all the time; America against Germany; America against the world; America, right or wrong; always America. We are Ameri-

Ruppers of a Cabinet Resignation

New York, Jan 23. - The World's Washington special says: The official centers of Washington have awakened to a sense of the strained relations between the state and navy lepartments, arising out of a difference of views as to the proper course to be pursued by the government in the Samean affair. The publication of the correspondence between Secretary Whitney and Representawhich has been made the vehicle of the information that the policy of unlimited patience pursued by the state department was not concurred in by the navy department, can be interpreted only in one vay, and that is in accord with the advance information given. It is not in Secretary Whitney's nature to sit inactive and silent, and have his department charged with its share of blame for the policy which in the councils of the government he strenuously opposed.

The rumor is current here that either Se retary Whitney or Secretary Bayard will resign within the next few days, the report even going so far as to say that a resignation has already been offered to the president. While it is not known that the have any foundation, in fact the present strained condition of affairs in the cabinet a undoubted by the cause of their circulation and the developments of the next few days will be watched with unusual interest.

The Entertainment Given by a Fire Worshiper of India-Perhaps no race of people is less known or more interesting to the student and traveler than the Parsees or Fire Worshipers of India. They are delightful hosts, and as it was my good fortune to form the acquaintance of Sir Framgee Demshaw Petit, who was knighted for a gift of $500,000 to an educational institution, I will endeavor to describe an entertainment I attended at his palace.

Sir Framgee lived in patriarchal magnificence, and when his whole family Syrup Compeny, San Francisco, Cal. is seated at table they number fiftyfive. We were received in the grand drawing room, as large as a fair sized church, and presented to the ladies. We found them pretty, intelligent and vivacious, and it is no exaggeration to say that they compared quite favorably with their American sisters.

The ladies were attired in graceful native costumes. The dress consisted of a waist, such as is worn by Europeans. with a long searf of embroidered silk or crape, called a sarre, wrapped several times about the waist and falling in broad folds about the limbs in lieu of a skirt. One end of the sarre was brought over the head and dropped gracefully in front, constituting a very effective head-Their jewels were magnificent. No crowned head of Europe possesses their equal, and such an array of diamends. pearls, sapphires and emeralds can scarcely be imagined. One of the guests wore eight strings of pearls, which far excelled the celebrated necklace of Queen Marguerite of Italy.

The state costume of the men is white, but on ordinary occasions they appear attired in the conventional European evening dress. One peculiarity of their vostume is not, however, to be met in a deaths from coughs, pneumonia and London drawing room. They never uncover their heads, and a high, conical Persian hat-or at meals a skull capalways completes their dress. On the occasion I am describing an

the tourist is that of the grotesque on tus of Arizona territory. Like other tropical productions, it is totally unlike any preconceived notions of what nature could design. The plant is leafless, having a bare, fleshy stock, protected every where by sharp and venomous barbs Its flowers are considered among the cheicest, varying from white and yellow to deep crimson or purple. These blos soms, capitulum, are wax like, and their inflorescence calls to mind Alladin's fabled experience among the fairly plants. with their sparkling fruits of diamonds and other gems.

The fruit is egg shaped, with a crown on the upper side, and is generally de licious, presenting as varied colors as the flowers. It contains a large quantity of seeds, surrounded by a nicely flavored inicy substance. In different species the fruit in size is all the way up from a canary's to an ostrich's egg. The cactus many months without water, although it is only seen in its perfection under a that a piece from any part will take root and grow if placed in the ground, even though it has lain around for a time. It thrives equally well on a piece of bure rock in a scorehing tropical sun as it would packed in ice in a northern zone. It is a paradox-a currosity in the vegetable kingdom.-Corona News Letter. Charmana New Decorative Objects Pro-Stored by Skillful Art Workers

There are some delightful little screens that are most ornamental. Two fold and four fold they are, and fanciful enough for the most elegantly furnished bouldirs. Some are paneled with brocades of almost inde-scribable tints, which are still further embellished with embroidery. The frames are very light and graceful, with railings at the top and a deeper rail at the bottom.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

Austria, like France, his adopted for the A quaint screen panel is embroidered with arming of her infantity a gun of small caliber, a small pattern worked on it here and there, suggestive of the Japanese mode.

A good specimen of what can be done by a clever transferer is a chair covering which is used on a fancy carved chair. The work has been transferred on to white drill, which shows up the beautiful tints of the wool splen-

Modern copies of old embroidery are very fashionable, and for occasional chairs white drill seats, worked with bronze, green and brown feliage, thrown up with terra cotta and soft blue flowers, are welcome additions to morning rooms and libraries.

A handsome hall chair is one covered in terra cotta plush, embroidered with paler shades of terra cotta, bordered with fringe to match. New foot stools are heart shaped or square, on straight wooden lega. The tops are covered with embroidered serge, and ribbons are tied into bows about the legs. An electric blue serge is worked with soft shades of pink and blue flowers, and pink and electric blue ribbons finish off the dainty little affair.

Many tea cloths are embellished with drawn linen borders. A more fanciful tea cloth is of white linen with drawn work and corner sprays of chrysanthemums done in terra cotta silk. A white serge table cover is embroidered with a set pattern in various col-ors and edged with lace.

Perfumed Bureau Mats.

A fine towel, or even a white paper, is the usual cover for the bottom of bureau drawers, but how much daintier is a set of perfumed mats for that purpose, or at least one mat for the top drawer in which one's most cherished possessions are usually kept. The preftiest of these, according to The Home Maker, are made of satin lined with muslin, with an interlining of sheet wadding, upon which is sprinkled some violet powder. Outside and sprinkled some violet powder. Outside and lining are run together and edged with chemile the color of the satin.
